THE PINK MOUNTAINTOPS

Bad Boogie Ballin' • Rock'n'roll Fantasy • I (fuck) Mountains • Can You Do That Dance? •
Sweet '69 • Leslie • Tourist In Your Town • Atmosphere

Can a sexually frustrated Canned Heat seduce a hot and bothered Neu into a cheap one night stand?

The rock'n'roll road can be a long and lonely one. And it leaves much time for the mind to wander, to fixate and to obsess over the human body and all its wondrously dirty parts. Enter The Pink Mountaintops. Their debut record begins with "She caught my eye and I was on fire" and it ends with a repetitive begging plea "Don't walk away!" from a reworking of Joy Division's "Atmosphere". In between these bookend statements, mountains are fucked, an ode to rock'n'roll groupies is sung, and tales of loose panties and ex-models are exposed.

The Pink Mountaintops is Stephen McBean, formerly of Jerk With A Bomb and now also exemplar member of Black Mountain. The debut record—conceived at dawn, while high on a mix of trucker speed and Red Bull, and while sailing down a Colorado highway en route to Denver as the last decent Floyd record played on the cassette deck—was written and recorded in a month with friends Amber Webber, Joshua Wells, and Christoph Hofmeister. The fore-mentioned country drone stoned drug rock band Black Mountain lent limbs, lungs, and amplifiers to the festivities.

NOT AVAILABLE FOR EXPORT TO AUSTRALIA OR CANADA. (This album is licensed in both territories.)

SELLING POINTS:

1. This record is laying the groundwork for the Black Mountain S/T CD coming out on Jagjaguwar in the fall, with both releases having corresponding covers. Despite this being a debut record, it will enjoy a much lengthier than typical promotional gestation period due to its connection to Black Mountain.

2. Extensive domestic and international publicity.

3. Extensive domestic college radio promotion.

4. Promotional copies and photos available.

5. The band will tour North America this summer in support of this release.

6. Advertisements will run in Magnet, Harp, Wire, Arthur, Copper Press, Mojo, Careless Talk Costs Lives, Exclaim, Skyscraper, Comes With A Smile, and Pitchforkmedia.com.
