

BURD EARLY

MIND AND MOTHER

Catalog Number: WV27 Format: CD Release Date: 3/16/04
UPC: 656605452722 CD; 656605452715 LP Label: Western Vinyl

NOT EXPORTABLE TO NEW ZEALAND

info@westernvinyl.com www.westernvinyl.com

Fear and laziness too often dictate much of how we live, or rather don't live, trapping our lives in a holding pattern that keeps us from becoming what we might be. When you listen to Burd Early's latest album Mind and Mother, you'll be reminded that the door of the cage isn't locked and that it's time to be free. The album flows with a sense of purpose and urgency of emotion, giving you the feeling that Burd Early is singing these songs as a way of grasping at an elusive truth. He seems to be on a mission, looking for a new openness and a new way to be. He's embarking on this mission with or without you, but we certainly hope you'll join him.

Sonically, Mind and Mother has an almost sensual quality to it, bringing together lush electronic musical atmospheres with a mellow and melodic rock backbone. The album begins with the track "How Far" droning triumphantly to a rock-steady beat. Like a solitary fisherman setting out to sea, fearful of being swallowed up should he go out too far from shore, the singer asks, "How far to go?" What follows is the alternately wild and reflective track "Warm Blood," with its crackling guitar and primitive chant -- "There's a silence happening underneath all the acting" -- a calling out to the seemingly immutable silence of our unfeigned selves. The cold metallic rock of "Blackdot" will make you feel trapped behind your eye lens, only to be set free again by the gentle fusing of slow country and electronic warbling in "Undoing the Day." On the instantly catchy "Fertilizer Waiting to Happen," Burd Early sings with an almost Pavement-esque crooning about our inevitable fate. The title track, "Mind and Mother," follows a tender groove that sets the heart aflutter with its alluring melody and it's hopeful resolve to make a union from what's been torn. The album closes with the bubbling electronics of "The Web that Weds," a brooding ode to honesty.

There's a desire in the songs on Mind and Mother that would likely make warm blood boil if not for the soothing comfort delivered by Burd Early's voice. This is the seductive conflict that draws you in, the friction and the struggle that holds your attention, and the reason you'll want to press play again and again.

ALSO AVAILABLE:

Magnet Mountain CD (Western Vinyl) WV12

Leveler CD (Western Vinyl) WV18

Burd Early's Observatory EP (King Crab / Western Vinyl) KCR03

SC DISTRIBUTION
1021 South Walnut
Bloomington, Indiana 47401
www.scdistribution.com

Contact Sarah at:
(812) 335-1572 telephone
(812) 323-8494 fax
sarah@scdistribution.com